Pyroclastic rocks are those extrusive igneous rocks resulting from explosive volcanic eruptions from volcanic craters and fissures. The descent of fine pyroclastic materials from eruption clouds by air fall deposition leads to accumulations of pyroclastic rocks in the basins around the volcanic craters. The green tuffs of Alborz mountains in north of Tehran is the best example of such pyroclastic rocks.